

Glen Carver

CO-OP CORNER

by Suzi Redman

Glen Carver is in the Co-op spotlight from Telstar Regional High School this week. He works for Saga Foods as a cook at Gould Academy.

Glen works at different times six days a week, and he likes his job very much. He helps with all three meals and sometimes does pots and pans. Glen is enthusiastic about being a cook, and raves about the food, which is very good. He meets a lot of people working at Gould, mostly kids who go to school there. Glen has definitely gotten a lot out of the experience; he has learned new foods, and is learning about how a food service works in management as well as in cooking. He wants the job because he likes to cook, and plans to make cooking his career. He enjoys baking best of all.

Glen may take a full time job after January, but plans to attend a Hotel Management or Culinary Arts school sometime after graduation. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Carver, of Gilead.

GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Colista Morgan, Corres. —

The cloudy dusk was warm, and smelled of wet earth and wet leaves.

Then snowflakes began to drift through the air with feathery grace, white and pure. They traced the maples, and adorned the stubbles of the fields.

"There is a quietness that comes with snow. When Earth resigns herself to Heaven's will And puts away her brilliant autumn glow To lay this winter white upon the hill."

So we'll say again, "Howdy, Mr. Winter, we thought we heard your laughter about a week ago."

We saw you coming when the woods began to thin and the wind blew strongly through the heavy spruce boughs like the sound of rushing water. We saw you when the dark shapes of geese with powerful wings pushed southward calling their haunting cries. We saw you in the short days, the leafless trees, the hills so blue and purple, and the slanting light; so "Howdy, Mr. Winter."

With snow all around, the pond seemed bluer than ever. In the morning at six the breeze blew in little puffs beyond the shadows of the trees and the water rippled. The thermometer stood at 20 degrees. We remarked about the open water. At seven thirty as if by magic the whole pond out front even the channel was closed with thin ice. We had never seen it happen that way before.

The chill makes one appreciate the warmth of a fire; around which man first built his home.

And so November moves on. Quiet comes to the land and Thanksgiving to our country.

"Thanksgiving is a Pilgrim. And a golden ear of corn. It's the smell of turkey roasting On a frosty autumn morn. It's the ring of love about you As your family gathers round. It's the table leaves extended And the golden laughter sound. It's Thanksgiving all around us. And we call our loved ones near. For we love the sweet reunion. That we celebrate each year."

Paula Burn

The rejoicing and prayers of gratitude by the Pilgrims was the first Thanksgiving in American soil. In the year 1663, with the appointment of Nov. 23 as Thanksgiving Day, these words were written into the Plymouth Colony Records: "It has pleased God in some comfortable measure to bless us in the fruits of the earth."

On Nov. 23, 1775, a day of Thanksgiving was proclaimed by the legislature of Massachusetts.

The Continental Congress appointed Oct. 23, 1781 as a day of Thanksgiving, following Washington's defeat of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown.

In 1789 after Washington took his oath of office, he issued the first Thanksgiving Proclamation dating Thursday, Nov. 26, as a day of Thanksgiving.

The date has varied slightly—in one year a few years back the president proclaimed the third Thursday — instead of the fourth Thursday, but the American people by the large, celebrated on the traditional fourth Thursday. So again in this year, Thursday, Nov. 23, will be the American day of Thanksgiving.

We have much for which to be thankful may we all observe it with unfeigned devotion.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holt and Danny, Windsor, were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Leona's on Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Curtis spent a few days this week with Mrs. Walter Curtis in Farmington.

Anna Jarvenpaa entertained Doris Hayes, Edna Morris, Katie Tammin
